Historical Forces Shaping our Forest

Four historical forces have shaped our forests today: geology, glacial-geology, natural disturbances, and man-made forces. Peter will describe simple, practical ways of discovering these features that can be used by anyone, forester and woodlot owner alike.

Peter Hynard: Registered Professional Forester, 40 years experience, retired MNR

A Woodland World: bowing to nature

Woodland culture has been the basis of civilization across the world. Trees and Forests are important. They are the foundation of all life on land and of the oceans. They are the green machines on which all life depends. Take a breath and thank a tree...

Diana Beresford-Kroeger botanist, medical biochemist, author, lecturer and advocate for trees and forests
